About the Anker Research Institute

The Anker Research Institute consists of researchers and research institutions from around the world with the goal of generating knowledge to improve the living standards of working people and their families to a decent level throughout global supply chains. The Anker Research Institute produces living wage and living income studies in numerous countries across the globe. The Institute is led by Richard Anker and Martha Anker and is currently hosted by Social Accountability International (SAI) in New York, NY, USA. The Anker Research Institute is a founding partner of the Global Living Wage Coalition (GLWC).

The Anker Research Institute produces its publicly available living wage and living income studies with the help of a research network made up of over 40 individual researchers in ten countries.

Martha Anker

Martha Anker holds a MA in mathematics from the University of Michigan. Formerly an applied statistician with the WHO, she is a founding partner of the Global Living Wage Coalition and co-founder of the Anker Research Institute. She co-developed the Anker methodology for measuring living wages and co-authored the book Living Wages Around the World.

Richard Anker

Ricard Anker holds a PhD in economics from the University of Michigan. Formerly a senior economist with the ILO, he has published books and articles on a wide range of topics such as decent work indicators, poverty, labor markets, gender, child labor, and social dimensions of globalization. He is a founding partner of the Global Living Wage Coalition, and co-founder of the Anker Research Institute.
